ORTHOTICS

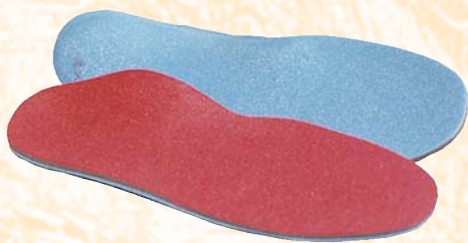

WHY DO WE NEED FOOT ORTHOTICS?

Feet are one of the most complex features of the human body with 26 bones and hundreds of joints, ligaments and muscles. While ambulating (i.e. walking and running), our feet are designed to absorb the force of heel strike then decelerate and "find the ground" through pronation. Pronation is not a bad thing, but over pronation and damaging repetition can injure your feet. Our flat surface environment contributes to this cycle. After finding the ground, the foot becomes ridged so it can act as a lever to propulse one onto their next step.

Over and over again this motion occurs. Add in the complexity of the footwear and the weight and medical conditions of the individual, you can understand why foot pain can occur.

Foot Orthotics and Inlays are designed to contribute to your foot health by being the interface between the flat ground and the complex foot. Through their shape and material construction, an orthotic can make a difference in every step.
